Kelburn Estate and Country Centre

Kelburn Estate covers an area of over 3,500 acres, starting at the edge of the sea and rising to a height of 1,300 feet. Two thousand acres is rough moorland, and fifteen hundred acres of the better land is contained within a seven foot wall that encircles the heart of the estate. There is 150 acres of agricultural land on the lower ground, 300 acres of planted woodland, 150 acres of amenity woods and 40 acres of park and garden which includes the area around the Country Centre buildings.

One of Kelburn's most outstanding features is its glen. In the space of just over half a mile, the Kel burn, which has helped to form the glen over thousands of years, rises on the moors 800 feet above the castle and drops dramatically, by way of many waterfalls and deep gorges, to the sea. The glen is a wealth of wild flowers and ferns, shrubs and trees, partly cultivated but predominantly wild.

Kelburn's Rangers are always available to answer your questions or to provide you with general information about the park. They also provide a number of other services and activities including special themed guided walks that are both fun and educational and suitable for all ages.
