Arran Whitebeams

The Isle of Arran is home to two species of tree, which do not occur anywhere else in the world, the Arran Whitebeam (Sorbus arranensis) and the Arran cut-leaved Whitebeam (Sorbus pseudofennica). They are Scotland's rarest native trees, and in global terms are officially classed as dangerously close to extinction by the WWF. Only a few hundred trees of each species exist, clinging perilously to the steep rocky slopes of Glen Catacol and Diomhan in the north of the island.
